

Alisher Faizullaev, Visiting Fulbright Scholar at Tufts University and Former Ambassador of Uzbekistan, spoke at the Mershon Center on April 18, 2012. His talk was titled, "Making States Sensible: Ritual, Symbols, and Feeling in Diplomatic Practice."

Alisher Faizullaev, Former Ambassador of Uzbekistan, is a Fulbright visiting scholar at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University.

Fazullaev responds to questions from members of the audience.

Faizullaev explained that symbols and rituals are essential parts of international diplomacy, and that they play an important role in power and identity politics of states.

Alexander Wendt (left), Ralph D. Mershon Professor of International Security, with Alisher Faizullaev (right), Former Ambassador of Uzbekistan